ConvergeOne Program Management and Source One Offer Webinar for Free Download

EAGAN, Minn., April 27, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- Continuing to expand their reach with industry leaders and cutting-edge service providers, ConvergeOne Program Management and Source One Management Services are pleased to offer a recent webinar for free download. Co-hosted by the two companies, "Managing IT Supplier Risk: The Critical Roles of Strategic Sourcing and Program Management" emphasizes the importance of strategic sourcing as a core program management function in identifying, managing and executing IT requirements. The webinar includes insight into key activities and processes underpinning IT supplier risk management and program management as a whole.

"When companies outsource to an IT supplier, they open the door to many risks — security, process management, project delays and even loss of vital information," according to webinar co-host Adam Cooperman, Vice President at ConvergeOne and leader of the ConvergeOne Program Management team. Therefore, the webinar also emphasizes how combining strategic sourcing and program management helps to ensure that IT enables the efficient execution of business processes across organizations.

Webinar co-host David Pastore, Director of IT Strategic Sourcing at Source One, added, "This topic is particularly relevant today with IT groups managing business processes that were previously completely foreign and supporting technologies that are totally new to the organization."

ConvergeOne Program Management and Source One Management Services often partner to meet customer needs, including providing education and training. The recent webinar was presented through NACR, a ConvergeOne company, and its Center of Excellence for Learning and Development (COE), and is available for free download through the ConvergeOne, NACR and COE websites. "Source One is delighted to be collaborating with the ConvergeOne team and NACR to present this topic," said Pastore.
